ABOUT MAGGIE

Maggie Thompson is a Nashville-based singer-songwriter and certified audio engineer whose atmospheric country sound blends intimate storytelling with cinematic production. Originally from Spartanburg, South Carolina, Maggie first took the stage at Nashville's The Bluebird Cafe at just 12 years old, beginning a journey that has evolved into one of country music's most promising emerging careers.

A graduate of the Dark Horse Institute with certifications in Audio Engineering and Music Business, Maggie brings both creative artistry and technical expertise to every project she undertakes. Her growing catalog of heartfelt music has earned more than 1.6 million streams connecting with listeners through authentic storytelling and emotionally driven performances. She's quickly becoming a name to watch in the modern country scene. Drawing on her own experiences of love, loss, and new beginnings, Maggie crafts songs that feel both deeply personal and instantly relatable. On stage, her warm, conversational presence and dynamic vocals turn every show into a shared moment with the crowd. With new music on the way, including "Living in a Memory," Maggie Thompson continues to build momentum as one of country's most exciting emerging solo artists.
